As a representative of academia in Japan, Nagasaki University has been conducting research for global health and infectious diseases in Africa. Recently, we are promoting the development of joint projects with Japanese private companies in Africa from the viewpoint practicality from research. When considering the solution of health problems in Africa and further promotion of African development, Academia, which has already been active in Africa, and a private company that is considering entering a new business together may establish a new development and this can lead Africa for further development. By this side-event, we are going to share information and seek for a new collaboration between academia and private companies aiming at African development.
